

Miguel Doria

Regional Hydrologist
IHP for Latin America and the Caribbean
UNESCO

Dr. Miguel de França Doria studied environmental engineering, worked as a water in a quality control laboratory and as a consultant for evaluations of hydrological environmental impact. Dr. Doria has a Ph.D. in Sciences Environmental Sciences from the University of East Anglia (Norwich, United Kingdom). From 2003 to 2006, he worked as a researcher for the Risk Understanding Program at the Center of Environmental Risk (United Kingdom). He was a Chevening and Calouste Gulbenkian Foundation scholarship recipient, and was also awarded the 1997-98 EPAL Prize. He joined the Secretariat of the UNESCO International Hydrological Program (IHP) in Paris in 2006, where, among other tasks, he was the Officer responsible for education related to water and Deputy Secretary of the IHP Intergovernmental Council. Since 2015, he has been the IHP Regional Hydrologist of the for Latin America and the Caribbean, based at the UNESCO Office in Montevideo.