

Mariana Cardona

Short Bio

Mariana Cardona is an International Affairs professional with over 4 years of experience and a strong background in development, particularly in Latin America and the Caribbean.

In her current capacity as Cybersecurity Program Officer at the OAS, Mariana supports the organization of capacity building activities related to cybersecurity. Additionally, she leads the implementation of a project aimed at empowering youth and fostering career readiness in OAS Member States.

Before working at the OAS, Mariana studied International Affairs at the George Washington University, where she specialized in Latin America and International Development. During this time, she conducted research in Brazil and volunteered in several NGOs.