

Patricia Aquing

Ms. Patricia Aquing has more than 30 years of international development experience focusing on Caribbean Small Island Developing States. She has served first as Programme Director and subsequently Executive Director of the Caribbean Environmental Health Institute, a technical institution of CARICOM responsible for Environment Management. Water Resources management and Water Quality was a major aspect of the Institute portfolio. In 2015, she joined the Caribbean Water and Wastewater Association (CWWA), where under her tenure, the Regional Strategic Action Plan (RSAP) for Climate and Water in Caribbean SIDS was developed as a blueprint for action in the Water Sector. Since 2019, she has been an independent consultant with an international agency.